The House of Waterford is not only a destination and Waterford's global brand experience centre but also the place where these master crafted pieces are being designed and hand crafted.

REFLECTIONS COLLECTION

A deep affection for the rich diversity of the Irish countryside with its leafy woodlands, sparkling streams and rugged coastline is a constant inspiration for designer Martin Ryan. His spare time is spent in these places of natural beauty and the changing seasons flood the senses with the sights and sounds of nature. The beautiful Reflections Collection, with its deep faceted pattern of sparkling diamonds and cascading olives, captures the light as it filters through the leafy undergrowth. Whether it be an evening in the woodlands or the spray of waves crashing against rugged coastline, the beauty of Ireland is transfixed in this crystal tapestry.

The Reflections Collection features four limited edition pieces that truly embody the Master Craftsman ethos. Each piece is lavishly cut and embodies the designer's creativity and the supreme skill of the crystal artists at the House of Waterford Crystal.

GARLAND COLLECTION

The Master Craftsmen at the House of Waterford Crystal showcase Christmas 2018 with the introduction of the new Garland Series, an explosion of fanciful copper-wheel engraved flowers on a crystal canvas of wedge and diamond cuts.

The depth of cutting and superb detail can only be created by hand. The relief is "sculpted" into the crystal at various levels of depth. To achieve such an effect is a rare craft that takes years of training as an apprentice, engraver and then master engraver.

WAVES OF TRAMORE COLLECTION

Tramore, (Irish: Trá Mhór, meaning "big strand or beach") is a seaside town in County Waterford on the southeast coast of Ireland. The town is situated on the north-western corner of Tramore Bay on a hill that slopes down to the strand, or sand spit, that divides the bay. Behind the spit lies the tidal lagoon known as the Back Strand.

Tramore is inextricably linked to the sea through legend and lore. On 30 January 1816, the Sea Horse, a military transport ship with the 2nd battalion of the 59th Regiment of Foot, was wrecked in Tramore Bay. 292 men, 71 women and children perished. Later, the Sea Horse was adopted as the symbol of the town of Tramore, and was later adopted as the logo for Waterford Crystal in 1955. From the sea, Tramore Bay looks like a safe haven in the Waterford estuary, but it is not. After the tragedy, Lloyd's of London funded the building of pillars — visible from the sea — including the erection of the 'Metal Man', to prevent similar calamities.

Designer, Tom Cooke, who spent many happy childhood moments in Tramore, has endeavoured to include in the design of this collection the round capped sand dunes, rolling waves lapping against the beach and turn of the tide. Three rings of cuts around the bottom, a nod to innocence of an earlier time and the difficulties of balancing nature's powerful effects on our lives, complete the design.

ARAGLIN

The Araglin River forms part of the boundary of counties Waterford and Tipperary and in the Knockmealdown Mountains there is a hidden falls, that is extremely difficult to find, but spectacular to view. It was this quiet, magical place that inspired the late, Jim O'Leary, Master Cutter and Design Director, to create the Araglin pattern in 1986.

SHORT STORIES COLLECTION

Ireland is a country of words. Spoken, written or sung, the Irish are famously verbose. A social people known for their warmth, hospitality and generosity, the Irish live in the spirit of togetherness, sharing and interaction.

Not surprisingly, Ireland has made a large contribution to world literature in all its branches, particularly in the English language. Poetry in Irish is among the oldest, with the earliest examples dating from the 6th century. Jonathan Swift, often called the foremost satirist in the English language, was very popular in his day for works such as Gulliver's Travels, and Oscar Wilde is well known for his often quoted witticisms.

In the 20th century, Ireland produced four winners of the Nobel Prize for Literature: George Bernard Shaw, William Butler Yeats, Samuel Beckett and Seamus Heaney. Although not a Nobel Prize winner, James Joyce is widely considered to be one of the most significant writers of the 20th century.

It is this human connection that inspires the new barware range - designed to bring people together - appropriately called 'Short Stories'. As the name suggests 'Short Stories' includes several small barware collections, all with interesting tales to tell.

OLANN

The Olann (Irish for wool) pattern takes its inspiration from the famous knitwear of the islands off the West Coast of Ireland known as the Aran Islands. The Aran knit sweater has since become the symbol of Irish Clan heritage.

The design for this collection is pulled from an Aran knit pattern known as the 'Diamond Stitch', representing the fields on the islands. These barren fields were often covered with seaweed from the Atlantic to help produce a strong harvest. From a distance, the layering of seaweed often created a repeating diamond pattern. The 'Diamond Stitch' represents a wish for success and wealth.

CLUIN

Dublin has produced some of the world's great writers, including Oscar Wilde, Bram Stoker, James Joyce, W.B. Yeats, Samuel Beckett, Jonathan Swift and Sheridan Le Fanu, amongst many others. Home to one of Europe's first and oldest public libraries, Dublin was officially named "the City of Literature" in 2010.

The Cluin pattern pays tribute to the towering grid-like oak book shelves of the carefully preserved 18th century Marsh's Library. It is one of the very few 18th century buildings left in Dublin that is still being used for its original purpose.
